The Captain, "Pop" Warner, and the Carlisle Indian School

1. Date: 10/10/2019

2. Time: 10:30 AM

The Carlisle Indian School was founded in 1879 by Richard Henry Pratt, a Quaker abolitionist and educator. Pratt believed in the "killing the Indian" and "raising the man" philosophy, which aimed to assimilate Native American children into white society. The school was the first boarding school for Native American children and was located in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. It was named after the British general who defeated the British at the Battle of the Clouds in 1762. The school was a model of assimilation and was a key institution in the history of Native American education.

Indigenous Americans in Statuary Hall

1. Date: 10/10/2019

2. Time: 10:30 AM

Statuary Hall is a room in the United States Capitol building. It is a hall of fame for the indigenous peoples of the United States. The hall contains statues of 51 Native American leaders, including Red Jacket, Geronimo, and Sitting Bull. The statues were created by various artists and were placed in the hall in the 1930s. The hall is a symbol of the government's recognition of the contributions of Native Americans to the United States.
